QGS NEWS

In our spring newsletter, we announced a large-scale road construction project happening right outside of our front door. Now, months later, the project has begun and is progressing successfully!

To recap: the project was inspired by the exceptional amount of large vehicle traffic and the seasonal ice and snow that we receive during the cooler months. These bad conditions helped prove that the current road infrastructure and design were no longer optimal for the volume and type of vehicles trafficking the road. As a result, a construction project to move and rebuild 170th Street began.

So far, we've seen progress in several areas of the project. New, larger culverts have been installed, and the base of the road has been shifted and widened. In addition, the hill to the south of the QGS driveway has been lowered several feet and straightened a considerable amount. Now, drivers approaching from the south can see through to the north end of the street. Overall, these adjustments will make drivers more visible and ensure approaching QGS from the south is much safer. Flip to page 3 to see photos of the updates.

The next phases of the project will include raising the grade of the road about 15 feet and creating a flat landing at the stop sign near the highway 64 entrance. As a result, seasonal conditions such as ice and snow will be less dangerous and more manageable for drivers.

Overall, the project is moving along on-schedule and we expect the first portion to be completed by the beginning of October.

QGS ONLINE

QGS online is continuing to provide up-to-date information for all of our customers this harvest season.

Most notably, we have been utilizing the homepage side bar (“Note from the Owner”) to announce updates on necessary road closures and upcoming construction notices. We encourage drivers and visitors to check the homepage before traveling to QGS to avoid unnecessary delays and ensure their preferred route is open.

Fall harvest updates have been integrated into the website. This includes our annual drying and storage rate update and a link to the latest Dairyland Seed catalogue. Details about our grain bids, capacity limits, and hours of operation will continue to be updated daily.

Feel free to give us a call if you have any questions or feedback about your experiences on www.QualityGrainServices.com! We love to keep in touch, and our website continues to be a great platform for that.

The guys have been hard at work repairing equipment and preparing for harvest.

Combines are being fixed, the grain dryer is getting cleaned out, and our technology is being tested to ensure optimal performance. We’re excited to get into the fields!

FACILITY & LOCATION

QGS is located at N12390 170th Street, Boyceville, WI. This is a quarter mile east of Connorsville, Wisconsin and south of Highway 64.

Because of our constant facility expansions, we understand that it may be difficult for you to find your way around the site. Check out the map to the right to find the locations of QGS buildings, and if you have any questions feel free to stop in the office to speak with our secretary!

A NOTE FROM THE OWNER

I hope this newsletter has helped share all of our exciting changes around QGS over the past couple of months. The road construction project is a huge undertaking, but I'm excited about how much this project will improve safety for customers and drivers traveling to and from the facility. We can't wait for the finished product!

I am also excited about how successful our partnership with Dairyland Seed has proven to be. Not only have we been able to provide accessibility and a great service to our customers, it's been exciting to hear our growers commenting on how nice their crops have been looking. This should make for a very busy fall season!

Unfortunately, we will be facing lower-than-ideal grain prices this fall. With rates this low, I'm very glad we were able to decrease our drying prices a bit! Hopefully, this season's good growing conditions will mean dryer crops to help offset grain prices a bit more.

Good luck as you begin your harvesting, and I look forward to seeing you around our facility this fall!

-Jeff

Road Construction Update: In order to increase visibility and soften the corner at the south edge of the QGS facility, a large hill is being lowered.

Road Construction Update: New, larger culverts have been installed to ensure a proper drainage system.
